Aquanaut Was Too Exhausted To Make Dive

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - The crew of a ligh titanium submersible, the 200-ton "Aquana-tou," made a hurried escape from the deeps of th Bay and returned to the surface on Wednesday wh they were conducting experiments off the coast of California.

The ex-Aquanauts were said to be exhaus ted. "I would never have been able to do this kind of work," one of the ex-Aquanauts said.

Some of the crew members said they had never been able to work as hard as they did on this mission. "It was a real strain," one mem ber said. "We had to work hard to keep the submersible going." The ex-Aquanauts are now resting and recovering from their long ex traordinary experience.

Cambridge, Mass. (UPI) - University President Henry L. Trotman of the University of California, on Thursday morning, denied any connection between the university's financial problems and its recent decision to raise tuition fees. Trotman said the decision was made to avoid further cuts in the budget and to maintain the quality of education.

"The university is not in financial crisis," Trotman said. "We have been careful to manage our finances and we are committed to maintaining the quality of education." Trotman added that the university is exploring alternative revenue streams to help offset the costs of running the institution.

Rowdies Hurt 70 At SF'S Chinese Parade

FRESNO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE — The 20th ann iversary of the Chinese New Year parade in San Fran isco was marred by a violent incident that left 70 people injured, according to police reports.

San Francisco police said the incident began around 10 a.m. when a group of rowdy fans began to闹 out of control. The fans were reportedly drinking alco hol and engaging in violent behavior.

Police said the fans then began to throw objects at the parade participants and vehicles. Several people were injured in the melee, including several children.

Police were able to control the situation after approxi mately 30 minutes. No arrests were made.

The San Francisco Police Department said it is investigat ing the incident and is working to determine the roots of the violence.
